Sin Tax

WHAT The Indian Beverage Association (IBA), which represents the country's biggest soft drinks makers, including Coca-Cola, PepsiCo, Parle Agro and Red Bull, has written to the GST Council and finance minister Nirmala Sitharaman, asking beverages to be removed from the 'sin tax' category. According to Investopedia, a sin tax is levied on specific goods and services at the time of purchase. These items receive the excise tax due to their potential or perception to be harmful to the society. Applicable items, include tobacco products, alcohol and gambling ventures.

X-PLAINED

WHY ARE THEY LEVIED According to experts, sin taxes are levied to deter people from engaging in socially-harmful activities and behaviours. They also act as a source of revenue for the government. In other words, sin taxes are intended to serve two objectives: To make the undesirable goods so expensive that the consumers would be forced to give up the habit, and to compel the industry producing these products pay higher tax, which can be used to fund other welfare expenditure.

A GLOBAL TREND

- 1 In India, cigarettes, pan masala, tobacco and alcohol have always attracted high taxes. Aerated drinks, which are also considered harmful for health, are placed in the GST slab of 28% and a compensation cess of 12%
- 3 Countries, such as the UK, Sweden and Canada, impose sin taxes on a series of products and services—tobacco, alcohol, lotteries, gambling and fuel
- 4 Mexico imposed a soda tax in 2013; recently, the UK has imposed a sugar tax to tackle obesity on all the foods and drinks with high concentrations of the sweetener

CRITICS' TAKE

According to critics, sin taxes give the state the moral authority to dictate what the citizens should and should not do. It is against the spirit of democratic rights, they allege. Besides, it has been observed that while sin taxes may reduce the purchases of a product for a few initial years, consumers who are really addicted to the habit persist with their 'sinning'.

Student develops 'ROBO HELMET' to strengthen security forces

Anjali Shrivastava, a student of the Ashoka Institute of Technology and Management, has developed a helmet that can help to strengthen the security forces. The 'Robo Helmet', which works on the radio signals, can remotely fire at enemies in war-like situations. Shrivastava, who hails from Varanasi, hopes that the 'Robo Helmet' will surely prove to be a revolution in terms of border security. "It is specially- designed to strengthen our troops. However, it is a prototype right now, we have sent a requisition to the ministry of defence so that we can make it more powerful," she said.

INNOVATION

- The remote-operated device, equipped with wheels, micro gun, and wireless system, can also enter in to the opponent's area and open fire
- If someone tries to attack a soldier from the rear, then it will generate signals and alert the soldier. A wireless fire trigger is connected with the barrel fitted in the helmet through radio frequency. This trigger can be attached with any kind of rifle to launch fire. If anyone tries to attack the soldier from behind, then the helmet will alert him, and he can open fire in the rear direction with the help of the wireless trigger
- The light-weight, remote-actuated helmet is capable of moving 360 degrees
- The prototype version can be operated through a remote within a range of 50 metres, while the gun in it can fire up to 100 metres

NEW DOG WALKING RULES IN GERMANY

Germany's dog owners will soon be ordered by law to walk their pets twice a day. The country's agriculture minister Julia Klöckner has said that she is introducing the new law based on evidence that many of the nation's 9.4 million dogs are not getting the exercise or stimuli they need. The law, which is due to be introduced next year, has started a debate in Germany. The main question is how it will be possible to check up on the 19% of German households that own dogs, which as pets are second in popularity only to cats.

- Under the new regulations in the Hundeverordnung, or Dogs Act, owners will not get away with a quick jog round the block, but will be required to take their dogs out for at least one hour on each occasion
- The tethering of dogs on a chain or a lead for long periods, also faces

- an all-out ban
- Dogs may not be left alone at home all day, and a person will be required to take care of their dog, "several times a day"
- Klöckner said: "Dogs are not cuddly toys. They also have their own needs, which need to be taken into account"

DO WE NEED SUCH A RULE IN INDIA TOO; WILL IT WORK IN OUR COUNTRY?

THE BIG DEBATE

Basic Debating Skills

Style

Style is the manner in which you communicate your arguments. This is the most basic part of debating to master. Content and strategy are worth little unless you deliver your material in a confident and persuasive way.

Speed

It is vital to talk at a pace which is fast enough to sound intelligent and allow you time to say what you want, but slow enough to be easily understood.

Tone

Varying tone is what makes you sound interesting. Listening to one tone for an entire presentation is boring.

Volume

Speaking quite loudly is sometimes a necessity, but it is by no means necessary to shout through every debate regardless of context. There is absolutely no need to speak any more loudly than the volume at which everyone in the room can comfortably hear you. Shouting does not win debates. Speaking too quietly is clearly disastrous since no one will be able to hear you.

Clarity

The ability to concisely and clearly express complex issues is what debating is all about. The main reason people begin to sound unclear is usually because they lose the “stream of thought” which keeps them going. It is also important to keep it simple. While long words may make you sound clever, they may also make you incomprehensible.

Use of notes, eye contact

Notes are essential, but they must be brief and well organised to be effective. There is absolutely no point in trying to speak without notes. Of course, notes should never become obtrusive and damage your contact with the audience, nor should they ever be read from verbatim. Most people sketch out the main headings of their speech, with brief notes under each.

When writing notes for rebuttal during the debate, it is usually better to use a separate sheet of paper so you can take down the details of what the other speakers have said and then transfer a rough outline onto the notes you will actually be using.

Eye contact with the audience is very important, but keep shifting your gaze. No one likes to be stared at.

Content

Content is what you actually say in the debate. The arguments used to develop your own side's case and rebut the opposite side's. The information on content provided below is a general overview of what will be expected when you debate. The final logistics of how long you will be debating, how many people will be in your group, and how the debate will unfold (ie: which team speaks first etc.), will all be decided by the one moderating the debate.

Example: How to put forth your case (argument)

Introduction – The case your group or you are making must be outlined in the introduction. This involves stating your main arguments and explaining the general thrust of your case. This must be done briefly since the most important thing is to get on and actually argue it. It is also a good idea to indicate the aspects of the subject to be discussed by each of the team members. Conclusion: At the end, once everyone has spoken,

➤ Having outlined the gist of your argument, you must then begin to build a case (the parts). To do this well, divide your case between two and four arguments (or divide your case based on the number of people in your group) it is useful to briefly summarise what your group has said and why.

How to build the parts of your argument

Having outlined the whole of your argument, you must then begin to build a case (the parts). The best way to do this is to divide your case into two and four arguments (or divide your case based on the number of people in your group). You must justify your arguments with basic logic, worked examples, statistics, and quotes. Debating is all about the strategy of 'proof'. Proof, or evidence, supporting your assertion is what makes it an argument. There are a number of ways of dividing up cases according to groups of arguments (eg political/economic/social or moral/practical or international/regional etc.) or just according to individual arguments if you can't group any together.

You must justify your argument with basic logic, examples, statistics, and quotes. Remember debating is all about the strategy of 'proof'

Our Success Stories

Laying a firm foundation

MARKS: 97.2%

STUDENT: Sri Nithya Bandi
CLASS: X E
BOARD: CBSE
SCHOOL: P Obul Reddy Public School, Hyderabad

Your initial reaction on hearing the news?

I was elated when I saw my name as one of the top scorers on the school website. I wasn't aiming to get top marks, and so when I heard the news I was pleasantly surprised.

What do you attribute your success to?

It was wholly the result of months of planning and studying. I would say that studying ahead and sticking to a proper schedule was what helped me perform well.

Your message to the students appearing for the boards?

Class X is not as cathartic and life-changing as it is made out to be. And it isn't as hard and as unachievable as it might seem. The marks you get in your Xth boards will not make or break your future. It matters more to learn and understand the concepts well, to lay a strong foundation for higher classes. Planning ahead of time and consistently working hard is key for success.

Your next step?

I am currently studying in class XI under the MPC stream. I plan to hopefully get into a good engineering college in the future.

HE TAUGHT ME TO DO GROUP TASKS BETTER

From MS Dhoni, I learnt about understanding my teammates. Whenever there is a group presentation assigned, I first understand the strengths and weaknesses of my teammates. I start by asking them to choose the sub-topics and prepare accordingly. Then, we discuss on who should speak on what. Everyone is free to voice their option.

HASITHA VITTA, Class IX, Silver Oaks International School, Hyderabad

➤ I first understand the strengths and weaknesses of my teammates during group tasks

I HAVE LEARNT TO SPREAD POSITIVITY

A leader is a person who not only leads a team but ALSO guides and motivates them. MSD is one such great example of what true leadership is. From him, I learnt, that leadership does not only mean to lead a group of people but a leader has to guide them to stand together. A leader has to remain focused.

HARDIK VOHRA, XC, Apeejay School, Pitampura, Delhi

➤ I have learnt to remain focused and cool. As a leader, I want to spread positivity!

TEAMWORK IS ACTUALLY TEAMWORTH

Mahi has taught me – TEAMWORK! His cool demeanour shows that we all should be calm and not give up hope even if things don't go our way. Acceptance is equally important. He has shown the world to tackle all situations calmly, without hesitation. My favourite Mahi phrase is: "Take actions in silence, no lion attacks in noise".

FARIHA IRFAN SHAIKH, XC, Sardar Dastur Noshervan Girls High School, Pune

➤ Perform in silence. A lion doesn't make a ruckus while attacking its prey! Let your work speak

NEVER EVER TO STOP LEARNING

One of the lessons that we can draw out is that leaders must be willing to take risks and try out something new instead of sticking to patterns. However, a person should be humble and never stop his learning curve.

➤ Earlier, I used to be very proud of my achievements. Mahi taught me to be humble, yet confident

MS Dhoni is a believer in experiential learning. As per him learning by doing is the best way to fasten the learning process.

RAYNEE MAKROO, CLASS X, Apeejay School, Pitampura

VISION IS IMPORTANT, BUT SO IS CONFIDENCE

Some of the life lessons one can learn from Dhoni are – be authentic, be bold/take risk and stand out. The first responsibility of a leader is to craft a grand vision, articulate it, and raise the aspiration, confidence, pride, hope and enthusiasm of his people. Dhoni did it to perfection. A great leader leads by example.

➤ I have learnt to lead from the front and walk the talk. Only then can I be a true leader

SHAURYA KOCHAR, Class IX, Venkateshwar Global School

I HAVE LEARNT TO TAKE RESPONSIBILITY

He has always shown us his charismatic leadership skills during his captaincy. He manages to stay calm and focused in every situation. This amazing attribute of his earned him the title 'Captain Cool'. He is never overpowered with emotions and takes full responsibility of his team's triumphs and defeats.

➤ If we win, the team takes all the accolades. But if we lose, the responsibility is solely mine

NIDHI, Grade X, New Age World School
