Raksha Bandhan

"Raksha" means "Protection" and "bandhan" means "To tie".

Raksha Bandhan celebrates the love and relationship between brothers and sisters. It is celebrated in the month of Shravan on the full moon day in August. In Raksha - bandhan, the sister will tie a woven thread around her brother's wrist called a Rakhi. The sister will pray for her brother, the brother vows to protect her. The brother will give a gift to his sister and will feed each other sweets. They will exchange the gifts and the brother will give money to his sister. That is how Raksha Bandhan is celebrated.

Ganesh chaturthi

Ganesh chaturthi is the most popular festival in India. This festival is also known as Vinayak chaturthi. This festival is celebrated as the birthday of Lord Ganesha to honor and welcome him. According to Hindu calendar, this festival is celebrated in the month of Bhadrapada. On the day of Ganesh chaturthi, people bring and install the Ganesha idol in their homes and temples by decorating and singing and dancing. Various trusts and societies also set up pandals for worshipping Lord Ganesha.

Devotees offer lots of things to Lord Ganesha of which modak is his favourite. Children are very much loved by Lord Ganesha and they are called him 'Friend Ganesha'. This festival ends on Anant chaturdashi with Ganesh Visarjan. Ganesh chaturthi is celebrated as a symbol of wisdom, happiness and prosperity.

Holi is one of the brightest festivals of India. Just like Diwali Dussehra etc. This festival is also called as festival of colours where people try to colour each other with abeer, gulal and other splash of colours. The festival of Holi is celebrated in the midst of Spring and summer season and each and every moment of holi is enjoyable. We celebrate Holi with friends, family and others. The night before Holi is celebrated as "Holika Dahan" where huge bonfire is set and various rituals are conducted. Various mouth watering delicacies are prepared like gujiya malpua, etc. I love Holi Happy Holi!!!

Hurray! Tomorrow is a festival and I am delighted. This is how I feel on a festival day. Festivals are celebrated with family and friends.

Every festival has a significance and is celebrated to cherish and recall the significance. Festivals are very important as they bring the family members together. They remind us to spend time with family and also pray to god. We have many festivals in India and my favorite one is Ganesh chaturthi.

On Ganesha chaturthi, I go out with my parents to get Ganesha idol and decorative items. I wear new dress and do puja to Lord Ganesha. I place my books at Ganesha feet and pray to give me good knowledge. I listen to the story that my mom reads out. My mom cooks special and yummy dishes and we enjoy them after offering to Lord Ganesha. We do puja to the idol for 9 days and immerse the idol in water. Ganesha chaturthi is a big festival in India as Lord Ganesha is the very first God that people worship before starting any new activity.

Festivals are fun! We celebrate many festivals in August month. Rakhi is my favourite festival. In my school I made a rakhi. I tie a rakhi to my sister and father. We send rakhi to my brother and my uncle in my home town. In Rakhabandhan we should tie rakhi to our family and friends.
